BILL A LAW AT MIDNIGHT

President Picks Hour of Signing When Nation Industrially Rests.

President's Outline of the New Freedom

"We have set the business of this country free from those conditions which have made monopoly not only possible but in a sense easy and natural. But there is no use taking away the conditions of monopoly if we do not take away the power to control and guide and direct the credit of the country to the power to say who shall and who shall not build up the industries of the country, in which direction they shall be built and in which direction they shall not be built. We are now about to take the second step, which will be the final step in setting the business of this country free. That is what we shall do in the currency bill."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Democratic tariff revision, the second long tariff law that has been put on the statute books in seventy-five years, is now a reality.

President Wilson signed his name to the Underwood-Simmons bill at 9:10 o'clock to-night in the presence of an impressive gathering. Two hours and fifty minutes later, at midnight, the new law went into effect with the exception of a few items. With the last stroke of the President's pen ending seven months of continuous labor on the part of the Democratic leaders and many years of agitation, the President arose, and facing the friends whom he had invited to witness the ceremony, delivered a speech. In this address he served notice that the Democratic party's task was only half completed, its journey but half finished, and that currency legislation must follow at this session of Congress.

Completion of Freedom. His signing of the tariff bill, the President said, was only the first step in the freeing of American business interests from the shackles that had bound them. That freedom, in the President's opinion, will not be complete until the power to create monopoly has been destroyed and this power is lodged in a control of credit.

The President in the speech sounded a modest note so far as his personal efforts were concerned, and generously granted to others a richer share of the honor, though with Henry V. he exclaimed: "If it be a sin to covet honor, then am I the most offending soul alive!"

Here are the President's remarks in full: "Gentlemen: I feel a very peculiar pleasure in what I have just done by way of taking part in the completion of a great piece of business. It is a pleasure which is very hard to express in words, because the feeling that I have is that we have done the rank and file of the people of this country a great service. It is hard to speak of these things without seeming to go off into campaigneering, but much of myself or of my country, as we are taking away the conditions of monopoly if we do not take away also the power to create monopoly; and that is a financial rather than a merely circumstantial and economic power. The power to control and guide and direct the credit of the country is the power to say who shall and who shall not build up the industries of the country, in which direction they shall be built, and in which direction they shall not be built. We are now about to take the second step, which will be the final step in setting the business of this country free. That is what we shall do in the currency bill which the House has already passed and which I have the utmost confidence

A TRIUMPH—"LONDON TIMES."

Says Tariff Struggle Has Brought Credit to Wilson.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Commenting on the passage of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill the Times says President Wilson is justified as halting the issue of the tariff struggle, which has brought him nothing but credit, as a victor to the people. The passage of the bill, says the Times, is a triumph of economic sanity and a triumph of self-government.

U. OF P. PROFESSORS INDICTED.

Five Surgeons Charged With Cruelty After Vivisection.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—Five professors and surgeons attached to the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania were indicted by the October Grand Jury to-day on twelve bills charging unnecessary cruelty to dogs in the experimental laboratories of the university. They were arrested last June on evidence furnished by the Women's Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Those indicted are: Dr. Allen J. Smith, former dean of the medical school; Dr. Edward Tyson Reichert, professor of physiology; Dr. Alonzo Englebert Taylor, Benjamin Rush professor of physiological chemistry; Dr. Richard Mills Pearce, Jr., professor of research medicine; and Dr. Joshua A. Sweet, assistant professor of medical research.

John R. K. Scott, who is prosecuting the cases, declared to-day that the society is not attacking vivisection, but that it intends to prevent, if possible, needless dogs after they have been operated on in medical laboratories. The prosecution contends that dogs are fed with garbage and allowed to lie on cement floors with undressed wounds following operations.

It is also alleged that frequently the same dog is made the subject of three or four operations.

On hearing following the arrest of the professors and surgeons it was brought out that dogs were subjected to a starving process at the university.

OLDEST CONVICT DIES INNOCENT OF CRIME

Father Had Confessed to the Murder for Which Son
Served 48 Years.

SCIENTISTS GET BRAIN

Gilbert's Belief Was That It
Would Show He Did Not Do Murder.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 3.—With the unenviable distinction of being the longest confined convict in the State Charles Gilbert of New Britain died last Tuesday at the State Prison, of which he had been an inmate for forty-eight years.

He died protesting his innocence and claiming, as he had since the death of his father years ago, that the father was guilty of the atrocious murder of Henry Caldwell, recruiting officer and civil war bounty agent, in 1864.

To-day the clergyman who attended the elder Gilbert on his deathbed announced that there was a confession and made the further statement that though he had placed the confession before the State Board of Pardons Gilbert was not released because the necessary unanimous vote of the board was not obtained.

Warden Ward A. Garner explained to-night the curious reason why Gilbert's body was not claimed by his relatives, but was permitted to go to the dissecting rooms at the Yale medical school. Gilbert asked that his brain be examined after his death by Yale scientists in the belief that the investigation would corroborate his claim of innocence by revealing that such a brain as his could not have conceived or executed the Caldwell murder and that he was free from homicidal taint.

Believed Brain Would Tell.

"If I had committed that murder," he argued with the warden, "the action would be stamped on my brain." Tom Gilbert, a cousin of the dead convict, was seen at his home in Southington to-night and he affirmed his belief in his cousin's innocence and in the probability of the deathbed confession.

"Charlie knew considerable of the teachings of Lombroso, the famous Italian criminologist, and he once told me that he thought 'examination even after death was better than being buried and leaving this world under the stigma of being a murderer.'"

The Rev. George A. Lester, now living at 191 Williams street, this city, and formerly pastor of the Chestfield Baptist Church, said to-night that John Gilbert, the convict's father, confessed to another son the day before he died that he was the murderer. At the request of Gilbert Mr. Lester interceded with members of the Board of Pardons and with members of the Legislature, but he said to-night that he understood that some members of the board stood out against the petition for pardon because they wanted witnesses of the confession.

Escaped 25 Years Ago. Mr. Lester says he is sure that another brother who later committed suicide was implicated with the father. There are two daughters of the dead convict living in Massachusetts, according to the cousin, who told to-night how the convict escaped from prison twenty-five years ago. He was kept concealed in Colchester, wearing the disguise of an old woman for two months, when he ventured to New York State and was arrested and sent back to prison from Utica.

He thinks the two daughters live in Springfield and are well to do. They were infants at the time of the crime and did not know who or where their father was until told by their mother when she was dying. After that the two daughters and Gilbert's two sisters, who live in New Haven, visited him frequently at the prison.

Tom Gilbert says he had never heard an admission from the elder Gilbert that the latter committed the crime, but circumstances led him to believe that the elder Gilbert participated in it. He says one thing which made him believe that the prisoner's father was guilty was the constant association and meetings the elder Gilbert had with Parsons, who was implicated in the crime, immediately after the murder.

That Charles Gilbert was a thoroughly bad man is the opinion of his cousin.

FINDS NEW HAVEN A MONOPOLY.

Gregory Report Now Complete—
Civil Suit First.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The report of special assistant to Attorney-General Thomas L. Gregory, who has had charge of the investigation of the New Haven, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, is practically completed.

It was announced by the State several weeks ago that this investigation would result in an anti-trust suit against the New Haven, and that possibly criminal proceedings against the officials of the road would be instituted by the Department of Justice.

It has developed that the criminal action will be brought separately from the suit in equity, if brought at all, and not until the civil suit is well under way.

The Government will see to it, however, in the trial of the civil case, that no witnesses obtain immunity from the prospective criminal charges.

The making public of Mr. Gregory's report is declared, will result in a greater sensation than did that of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which characterized the road as a monopoly. Gregory will contend, it is understood, that the New Haven controls more than two hundred lines in New England, in fact every line except the Grand Trunk, and that it controls every important steamship line that operates from a New England port.

DEAFNESS HELPED BY MESOTHOIRUM RAYS

German Physician's Announcement of Element's Use Causes Sensation.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun.
BERLIN, Oct. 3.—Another impetus has been given to the already insatiable demand for radium and mesothorium for medical purposes by a report printed to-day in a Berlin clinical weekly by Dr. Hugel saying that he has had remarkable success in the treatment of deafness and partial deafness with mesothorium and radium emanations. In view of the fact that it is estimated that more than half a million persons in Germany are deaf or hard of hearing, Dr. Hugel's discovery is attracting attention in both medical and lay circles.

Dr. Hugel reports that mesothorium rays have proved effective in almost all forms of partial deafness, and even where the disease has been chronic suppurative and liberation of long standing have quickly disappeared. In sharp contrast to the treatment of cancer, where the radium rays work destructively, Dr. Hugel says that the most interesting part of his treatment of the ears is that the rays revivify the tissue and nerves.

The municipal authorities of German cities continue their keen rivalry in the effort to secure an infinitesimal portion of radium or mesothorium. The Mayor of Dortmund purchased to-day a fifth of a gramme for $10,000. The city council of Charlottenburg and Schöneberg announced that they will each appropriate $5,000 for the purchase of small portions of these elements. Stockholm has decided to have the city physicians instructed in treatment with radium at the expense of the municipality.

LANDLORD EVICTS SUFFRAGISTS.

Failed to Pay Rent of Headquarters in Staten Island.

The Woman's Suffrage party of Richmond Borough, of which Miss Edith Whitmore is chairman, was dispossessed from its headquarters, a pretty little one-story building at Tompkinsville Square, yesterday afternoon by City Marshal George Perry. Timothy Saffery, the owner of the building, obtained the court order for non-payment of rent.

Hundreds of people were passing the headquarters shortly after 1 o'clock when two men employed by Saffery climbed through the back window, opened the front door and started in to carry out chairs, tables and other belongings of the suffragists.

Big yellow flags on which were printed in black letters "Voices for Women" and literature on the suffrage question were picked up by a strong easterly wind and blown all over the street.

HIT BY OSBORN'S AUTO: MAY DIE.

Natural History Museum Head Held
After Accident to Pedestrian.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 3.—John Brophy, 52 years old, is dying in the Tarrytown Hospital with a fractured skull, after a broken neck as a result of being hit at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon by an automobile owned by Prof. Henry F. Osborn of 850 Madison avenue, New York.

Brophy was standing in Broadway in front of Jacob Ruppert's estate when an automobile came south. Prof. Osborn was going north. Brophy, apparently blinded by the glare of the searchlights, jumped out of the way of the south-bound automobile and was hit by Prof. Osborn's car.

The chauffeur, Aaron Wrightman, stopped his car. Prof. Osborn and Dr. Robert Broome, who were in the car, picked Brophy up and rushed him to the Tarrytown Hospital. Dr. Fairchild said his death may be expected in a few hours.

Prof. Osborn and his chauffeur went to police headquarters, told their story and were detained pending the outcome of Brophy's injuries.

Prof. Osborn and Dr. Broome were on their way to Prof. Osborn's country seat at Garrison. Brophy is married and has three children.

Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn is president of the American Museum of Natural History, president of the New York Zoological Society and Da Costa professor of zoology at Columbia University.

SENATOR REED HITS JOHN M'INTYRE IN EYE

Row in Capitol Over Suppressed
Affidavit in Mulhall
Investigation.

"LIAR" AND "COWARD"

N. A. M. Member Says His Eyeglasses Were Broken on His Cheek.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—There was a row in the Judiciary Committee room of the Senate to-day, an echo of the recent Mulhall hearings. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, taking the offensive, slapped the face of John McIntyre of Philadelphia, a prominent member of the National Association of Manufacturers.

According to McIntyre's version to friends he got much the worst of the encounter. The blow, descending upon his brow, smashed his eyeglasses, raised a blue lump over his eye and the broken frame of the spectacles cut a gash over his cheek bone.

According to McIntyre the occasion for the outbreak was McIntyre's presence in the committee room.

During the Mulhall examination the Senate committee had under subpoena one James J. Reagan, formerly an employee of the Fritz Reuter Hotel in Washington, the meeting place of Mulhall and his one time intimates, Isaac H. McMichael and Representative James T. McDermott. Reagan had been summoned for the purpose of supporting Mulhall's testimony that he had corrupted Representative McDermott with money loaned without expectation of return.

Reject Reagan's Affidavit. He was unwilling to relate to the committee the story in the exact form necessary to substantiate the Mulhall charge and after repeated rehearsals of his story to two representatives of a newspaper it was determined that Reagan's evidence would not improve the creditable column stories and he was released from his subpoena.

Reagan is alleged to have given an affidavit to the counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers in which he related the history of his subpoena service and expressed the view that the negative opinion as to the value of his testimony had received the O. K. of Senator Reed. McIntyre had told several times of having the Reagan affidavit in his possession, and to-day Senator Reed, finding him in his committee room, walked up to him and, according to McIntyre, asked if it were true that he had been telling of having such an affidavit. The following is McIntyre's version of the verbal interchange which preceded the blow.

"You have an affidavit in your possession which says that I helped to suppress the testimony of that man Reagan," asked Senator Reed.

"I have," replied McIntyre.

"Liar!" Then a Blow.

Well, all I have to say to you is that you're a liar," shouted the Senator, advancing and delivering a sharp blow across McIntyre's face.

The latter staggered back, wiping the broken bits of glass from his eyebrows and swabbing his bleeding face. He grabbed his hat and, stopping at the committee room door, said:

"Senator Reed, you have taken advantage of your immunity as a United States Senator to strike a man who is, under the law, forbidden to strike you back or even to defend himself. All I have to say to you, sir, is that you are a contemptible coward!"

McIntyre withdrew, leaving his assailant standing in the middle of the committee room white with rage, his face working angrily and his eyes flashing.

Mr. McIntyre left the Capitol and went to his hotel immediately after the incident. He later left Washington, advising the hotel people that he would return to his city in a day or so.

Senator Reed to-night declined to discuss the incident.

U. S. JUDGE MURANE OUSTED.

McReynolds Demands and Receives Jurist's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Attorney-General McReynolds has demanded and received the resignation of United States District Judge C. D. Murane of Alaska, to take effect immediately.

It was announced at the Department of Justice that this action had been taken "for the good of the service" and no details as to Mr. McReynolds's dissatisfaction with Judge Murane could be learned.

The resignation originally was demanded by the Judge suggested that it be accepted to take effect June 1, 1914. The Attorney-General demanded that it be effective immediately.

The Attorney-General accepted the resignation of United States District Attorney B. S. Rhody, of the same district as Judge Murane, a week ago. Mr. McReynolds has recommended to the President the appointment of Jeff McMann of Tennessee to succeed District Attorney Rhody.

Michel Men Holding Off for Bigger

A bet of $200 at odds of 10 to 9 on McCall was placed on the curb yesterday afternoon, but outside of this there was little election betting, as the interest in politics in the financial district is now being subordinated to baseball. NEW YORK 'STUPIDLY IGNORANT.'

Representative Nixon Indicts Tammany as Partly Responsible.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Representative Thomas C. Nixon of Massachusetts, in a speech here to-night, contended that there is more "stupid ignorance" in New York in proportion to population than in any other city, town or village in the United States.

The stupid ignorance, Mr. Nixon attributed partly to Tammany Hall. He then referred to an Independence Day speech he made at Tammany Hall. "Later there was a dinner," Mr. Nixon continued, "the dinner consisted of tons of barbecued meat and countless loaves of bread. The persons who consumed the bread made up the most unlikeliest assembly I have ever seen. They are ravenously and seemed starved. While we have such persons as these sitting at the tables of political parties we cannot hope for civil enlightenment."

"Thank God I come from a State," Mr. Nixon said, "that is not cursed with a big city. There is not a town of 10,000 population in my State, and I am proud of it."
